THINKING of studying MEDICINE? iCanMed | UCAT Webinar FREE 13 Sept, 2:00 pm Online

One of the most critical pieces for successful UCAT study is understanding what questions to expect in the exam (specifically their unique features and nuances) and learn the exact ways to solve each question efficiently and effectively. Doing so allows you to quickly realise what techniques to use the moment you see a question so that you can be continuously adaptive, without any loss of time and drop in accuracy.

Here's the thing: little do people know that out of the five subtests of the UCAT, there are 14 major question styles found in the latest 2020 exam. Each of these styles can be solved in the same way.

In this 3-hr webinar, Michael Tsai, iCanMed's co-founder, will show you:

- What each these 14 question types look like with representative examples
- Explain the distinctive features of each question type that always reappear
- Discuss the numerous challenge that each type poses for the candidate to solve
- How to solve a selection of questions via live teaching demonstration
